Editorial...

Dear Brothers,

As we are at the beginning of another academic year, we're reminded that being Religious Brothers is, above all, about purely being present. In a world filled with noise, division and the constant chase for recognition, our quiet witness of brotherhood, service and prayer speaks powerfully of the Gospel.

To be a Brother today means choosing every day to walk alongside others with compassion and humility. Whether teaching in classrooms, helping those in the peripheries or sharing everyday community life, our mission isn't about titles or authority. It's found in the relationships we nurture, the lives we touch and the hope we bring by being faithfully present.

Pope Francis calls us to be “pilgrims of hope.” This means living in a way that shows Christ's love in ordinary moments—by offering a listening ear, a welcoming smile, a helping hand, or simply being there for someone seeking comfort, guidance, or companionship. Through these small acts of love and faithfulness, our vocation reveals God's transforming presence in the world.

In a time when the world feels more divided than ever, our communities are called to be places where true brotherhood is lived and shared. Living together—sharing meals, prayers, joys and struggles—is itself a powerful witness. It reminds us that fraternity isn't about being the same, but about choosing to love, forgive and support one another every day.

As you read the stories and reflections in this issue, I invite you to pause and give thanks for how God works through our Brothers across the Province. Each page tells of quiet dedication, faithful service and lives generously given to the mission.

We're especially grateful for our senior Brothers, whose wisdom, prayers and steady witness continue to strengthen and inspire us. We also thank God for our younger Brothers, whose energy, creativity and commitment breathe fresh life into our ministries. Each Brother, in his own unique way, contributes to the life and mission we share as one family.

As we journey forward together, let's do so with hearts full of courage, humility and joy. Trusting in God's faithful love, let's continue supporting one another and embracing the mission entrusted to us, confident that the One who started this good work in us will guide it to completion.

From the Provincial's Desk...

Dear Brothers, Collaborators and Friends,

Warm fraternal greetings to each of you as we open this new edition of our Province Bulletin.

Reflecting on my recent visits to our local communities and ministries, my heart overflows with gratitude to God for the quiet and steady faithfulness with which you live out our consecrated life. Whether in classrooms, social apostolate or in our caring for the vulnerable I see our charism alive—a ministry rooted not in show, but in genuine brotherhood and service.

As we look ahead to the coming months, I want to share three simple but important invitations for our journey together:

Deepen Our Rootedness in Christ:- Our ministries thrive only when our inner spiritual life runs deep. Amid busy schedules, let's protect our quiet times of Eucharistic adoration, communal prayer, and personal reflection on the Word. It is from Christ's heart that we draw the strength to love generously without keeping count.

Build Authentic Fraternal Life:- In a world torn by division, our communities must shine as signs of reconciliation and joy. Brotherhood goes beyond sharing a roof; it's a daily choice to listen with generosity, carry one another's burdens and celebrate the unique gifts each Brother brings.

Be Bold in Our Mission to the Young and Vulnerable:- Our founder St Montfort met the urgent needs of his day with courage and creativity. Today, new challenges like poverty and isolation especially affect young people searching for hope and guidance. Let's step courageously beyond our comfort zones to meet them where they are.

As consecrated Brothers, our call is not simply to keep pace with change but to meet it with wisdom, faith, and hope. Being adaptable doesn't mean losing ourselves or giving up the heart of our mission. Rather, it means trusting the Spirit to guide us toward fresh ways of living out our timeless purpose. When we look back, we see our founders and those before us courageously responding to the needs of their times with creativity. Their example reminds us that staying true to our calling goes hand in hand with embracing growth and renewal. Adaptability starts right here in our communities. It asks us to welcome change with patience instead of resistance, to see our differences as chances to learn from one another, and to face challenges with confidence, not fear. When a community learns and grows together, it becomes a stronger, more genuine witness of brotherhood and hope.

Being open-minded is just as crucial. In a world where knowledge is expanding quickly and questions are becoming more complex, we are invited to cultivate curious and humble hearts and minds eager to learn. This openness helps us listen deeply, appreciate different perspectives, engage in respectful dialogue, and make thoughtful decisions rooted in faith and reason. It frees us from being stuck in old patterns and equips us to better accompany the people we serve.

As we move forward, remember: "The Brother does not preach by words alone, but by a life that makes the Gospel visible and welcoming to all."

Tribal Resilience in Andhra Pradesh: Facing Climate Change Head-On

For the tribal communities of Andhra Pradesh, climate change is no longer a distant concern—it is a daily reality reshaping forests, farms, and village life. Once predictable monsoons now arrive late or with sudden intensity, while prolonged dry spells erode soil fertility and dry up streams. Traditional crops like millets and tubers are dwindling, and invasive species such as lantana are crowding out native plants vital for food and medicine.

Forests, central to tribal identity and sustenance, are under severe stress. Forest fires, biodiversity loss, and shrinking cover have intensified human–wildlife conflict, while the disappearance of medicinal plants weakens traditional healthcare systems. Rising cases of kidney ailments, cancer, and anaemia highlight the growing public health crisis. Agriculture, the backbone of livelihoods, struggles under erratic rainfall, soil erosion, and dependence on chemical inputs, leaving farmers vulnerable to market exploitation.

Yet, resilience remains strong. Communities are reviving mixed cropping, millet cultivation, and seed banks to restore soil health and food security. Restoring tanks, canals, and check dams is critical for water access, while Gram Sabhas—empowered under PESA and the Forest Rights Act—must lead forest protection and fair management of Minor Forest Produce. Skill development in tamarind processing, adda leaf plate making, beekeeping, and tailoring offers new livelihood pathways, reducing migration and empowering youth and women. Community nurseries and medicinal plant gardens can revive ecological knowledge and strengthen healthcare.

For tribal societies, climate change is not just about weather—it is a crisis of food, health, culture, and identity. Addressing it demands transformation: centring tribal voices, securing rights, and honouring indigenous heritage. With timely action, these communities can shape a climate-resilient future rooted in justice, sustainability, and the wisdom of India's first forest custodians.
